Train'd Up procedure for raising a concern under Prevent

Do you have concerns that an individual might be at risk of radicalisation or of being drawn into terrorism?

Immediate risk

No immediate risk

If you believe there to be an immediate threat to the safety of the individual, or of members of the local community or of the wider public, you should contact the Police or British Transport Police directly (999) and then report that you have done so to the Safeguarding and Prevent Champion, via email.

There is no set pattern to how radicalisation may occur, but if you are concerned about some or any of the following there is a risk that your concerns might be terrorism-related: sudden changes in peer group or religious practices; accessing, holding or distributing extremist propaganda material; an undertone of grievance or "them and us" rhetoric in language or behaviour; evidence of sudden or increased isolation from family and/or the usual social group; increased emotional instability, or cultural or social anxiety; processing suspicious items.

For example large amounts of money, multiple passports, or unusual-looking electrical appliances, or everyday items which could be used to make explosives. Some of these behaviours are also associated with mental health problems and might also suggest your concerns are related to welfare or safeguarding.

Risk appears terrorism-related

Risk does not appear terrorism-related

If you remain concerned that there might be a risk of radicalisation or terrorism, you should voice these as soon as practicable, depending on the individual's status, with the process listed below.

If you do not consider that there is a clear risk of radicalisation or of being drawn into terrorism, it is possible that you have identified another safeguarding or welfare concern, and you should follow the appropriate Train'd Up procedures depending on the circumstances (for example refer the individual to the Safeguarding and Prevent Champion or assessor/tutor).

Neither staff nor apprentice

If the individual is neither a apprentice nor an employee of Train'd Up, no further action is necessary, but you may wish to contact the Police or British Transport Police directly (999) to register your concern as a member of the public.
